

home about us

attend event

become a member

ageless education e-book

press member's log in

contact us

CHARLES PAUL BROWN

October 23, 2014
by People Unlimited Inc

CHARLES PAUL BROWN

1935 – 2014

home about us

attend event

become a member

ageless education e-book

press member's log in

contact us

“Man’s true nature and true heritage is to be physically immortal.”

People Unlimited and the growing global community of immortalists has lost a great advocate in the person of Charles Paul Brown. For over four decades, Charles spoke and wrote on the subject of physical immortality with singular passion and eloquence. Before longevity had even entered the mainstream jargon, Charles was declaring that the time is now to shrug off our old deathist ways and embrace a new and unlimited potential for the human species.

Declaring that immortality was the true destiny of mankind, Charles exhibited a deep commitment to his conscience in refusing to dilute his message even in the face of withering reactionary response. On the Larry King Show in 1991, he artfully dueled over scripture with Reverend Jerry Falwell, showing that death is not sanctioned by the Bible, and in fact, is revealed to be “the last enemy.” At the end of the show, Larry King told him: “I hope you’re right.

It was his great purpose in life to help overcome the superstition and ignorance that have traditionally blocked a deeper communication and more whole-hearted

home about us

attend event

become a member

ageless education e-book

press member's log in

contact us

own inspiration. While the ideas of immortality burned brightly within him, the living of it often eluded him. Too much stress and not enough exercise undoubtedly contributed to the heart disease and Parkinson's from which he suffered.

As anyone who has grieved for a loved one knows, the explanations hardly mitigate the loss. Rather, to honor his memory, we re-dedicate ourselves to living the life he envisioned and so compellingly spoke of to so many – a life free of death.

- Joe Bardin

♥ 4 Likes ↗ Share

Posted in Uncategorized

Newer / Older

Sign Up for Email
Updates

ATTEND AN EVENT

CONTACT US